13. WEBSITE SPECIFICS

13.1 Search Engine Performance, SEO and Digital Marketing

13.1.1 When undertaking a new contract, UFMedia will code The Client's site to be as search engine friendly as the project dictates is reasonable and achievable. If The Client wishes to take out an ongoing Search Engine Optimisation contract, this will take the form of a separate agreement to the website contract. In the absence of a Search Engine Optimisation contract, UFMedia is not responsible for ongoing site promotion.

13.1.2 The Client will implement or otherwise act upon the recommendations UFMedia make during the provision of the Services. In the event that The Client does not implement recommendations within 14 days of being advised to do so, The Client acknowledges that this may affect the performance of The Client's campaign for which UFMedia shall not be held responsible.

13.1.3 If a written contract is entered into by UFMedia and The Client for the provision of SEO or Digital Marketing, this contract will specify the exact services to be provided, in exchange for a charge calculated at a daily rate. UFMedia's rates are not dependent upon nor linked to site traffic, rankings in search engines or any other performance metrics or data supplied by third party companies.

13.1.4 All information pertinent to a Search Optimisation campaign shall be supplied to UFMedia, including history of any prior campaigns conducted with other Search Optimisation providers.

13.1.5 UFMedia shall not be responsible for URLs dropped or excluded by a search engine for any reason.

Where large applications are to be developed on servers not recommended by UFMedia, it is The Client's responsibility to provide a suitable testing environment which is identical to the final production environment.

13.3.3 The Client is expected to test fully any application or programming relating to a website developed by UFMedia before it is made generally available for use. Where "bugs", errors or other issues are found after the site/development is live, or after an agreed period of testing for the work being delivered, UFMedia will endeavour (but is not obliged) to correct these issues to meet the standards of function outlined in the original brief. Any “bug”, error or other issue found after 6 or more months following delivery of any application or programming cannot be considered for correction without additional charge, where not covered by a support or maintenance contract, due to changes in technology and the passing of a reasonable amount of time for testing and response.

13.3.4 Delivery deadlines are given as a guideline only and although UFMedia will endeavour to meet all its quoted deadlines, UFMedia cannot be held responsible if a delivery date is not met.

13.3.5 UFMedia will provide the amount of training deemed necessary for the successful handover of the deliverables at UFMedia’s discretion. Typically this will entail a single session of training for no more than 1.5 hours with The Client. If more training is required then this must be communicated to UFMedia at the point of handover, and UFMedia may at UFMedia’s discretion provide further training but UFMedia reserve the right to charge for further training on an hourly basis if there is no support and maintenance contract in place.

13.3.6 If the Client reasonably believes that the product or service supplied by UFMedia does not match the agreed specification in the original quotation or working document supplied by UFMedia at the point of sign-off on the planning stage, whichever is more recent in the project delivery, then the Client must notify UFMedia within a period of 10 working days following the date of delivery. UFMedia will then respond and endeavour to carry out the required change within a further 10 working days where possible and where the request is reasonable. If no contact is made before 10 working days following delivery then the Client will be deemed to have accepted the service as delivered.

13.3.7 The Client accepts that there is a risk with any system using credit card or personal data and UFMedia will take every reasonable action to ensure the security of this data in line with current industry practice or specific instruction from The Client. However, UFMedia cannot be held responsible for any breach of data security.
